

AUTO PLUNGES INTO DEEP CUT TWO MEN DYING

Boy Riders in Stolen Car Crash Through Fence Into Trench.

Accident Happened at Spot Where Martin Conley Jr. Was Killed.

Two deaths, two persons probably mortally hurt and more than a dozen others more or less injured is the automobile accident record for the past twenty-four hours. One of the deaths and the two fatal injuries resulted from "joy rides" in stolen autos—one in Brooklyn early to-day and the other in the Bronx.

A big 40-horse power touring car on its way from Coney Island shot through Hunterly road at 2:10 A. M. to-day at terrific speed with its five occupants. The persons in its path hurried in all directions as it reached Howard avenue, seemed to halt for an instant and darted around the corner. Then it shot through the avenue like a streak.

At Atlantic avenue is the Long Island Railroad tunnel. A cut leads to the excavation, twenty-five feet below the surface of the street. Around the cut is an iron fence, strongly imbedded in a stone foundation.

Just before he reached it the chauffeur of the flying automobile saw the fence. He cried out in terror and tried to swerve the big machine, but was too close.

Like a flash the auto struck the iron fence, and vaulting the stone foundation knocked down the metal as if it was so much grass. It turned almost completely over before it struck the bottom of the cut and spread out on the railroad tracks a complete wreck.

Seemingly by a miracle the five occupants escaped instant death. Those who were still conscious that one of their number was pinned beneath it.

Charles Holman, the chauffeur, crawled up the incline to the street level and began to shout for help. By the time Policemen George Little and Robert Whitman, who had heard the crash, reached the tunnel Holman had disappeared in the darkness.

The policemen knew a milk train was due to pass through the tunnel in a few minutes and that unless the survivors of the auto accident were rescued they would be struck by the train. One ran up and telephoned the railroad and the other hastily located the serious victims to the street and sent to St. Mary's Hospital for an ambulance.

The milk train was stopped a short distance from the tunnel. Soon Dr. Higgins arrived with an ambulance. Burton Fenwick was found to have a fractured skull and internal injuries, and it is believed, internal injuries. He was the one pinned beneath the automobile.

Frederick Blackenhorn suffered several scalp wounds, fractures of the knees, and has possible internal injuries. He is in a critical condition.

Louis Therman had a fractured wrist and numerous minor injuries, but was able to go to his home in Washington avenue, Glendale.

John Herz, of No. 227 Webster avenue, Glendale, had bruises of the head, and it is believed, internal injuries. After he had been treated by Dr. Higgins he mysteriously disappeared, and the police have sent out a Brooklyn alarm for him, as he is wanted as a witness.

The reserves of the Liberty avenue station were called out soon after the accident. All traffic on the Long Island Railroad was stopped for almost three hours, while the wreck of the big automobile was being removed from the cut.

Auto Was Stolen.
The police learned that the car belonged to Miss Jeanne Gascon, a prominent real estate woman of Brooklyn, living at No. 211 Stuyvesant avenue, and that Holman, the chauffeur, is her nephew.

She said he had no permission to take out the car. She had him take her to Woodhaven to visit friends last evening, she said, and when he brought her back at 8:30 P. M. she told him to take the machine to the garage.

Instead, it seemed, he went to Glendale, found his friends, and they went for an evening at Coney Island.

Holman was later found by the police, not seriously hurt. He said he had permission to use the machine whenever he wanted to, and that he took some of his friends to Coney Island last night.

According to his story, he came through Howard avenue on his way back to Glendale, because it was asphalted, and forgot about the railroad cut until he was so close upon it he could not stop. After the accident he became so frightened that he ran off to his home.

A similar accident occurred at the same place on Oct. 12 last when an auto went down the cut after a race through Howard avenue and killed Martin Conley Jr., son of the well-known Brooklyn politician. On this occasion, also, the chauffeur escaped serious injury and disappeared after the accident, but was later caught.

"Baccarat" Gown Worn on Stage by Miss Russell Widely Copied

MISS ANNIE RUSSELL'S "BACCARAT" GOWN.
Fine Costume Not "Stagey," but One That Appeals to Women of Taste.

All feminine New York is taking notice of the remarkable gown worn by Miss Russell in her new play, "The Stronger Sex." They are anything but stagey—just such gowns as any woman of unusually good taste would like to own and wear herself.

Never before has a stage dress received such homage as the beautiful baccarat gown of gold meteor crepe. Copy after copy is being made for the smartest women, the identical coloring and trimming being chosen in most instances.

The skirt is made with an overskirt, embroidered in an Egyptian design of gold down the front. The back of the overskirt is open two-thirds of the way down, the slit being bordered by a band of the embroidery. Below the slit it is shirred up the centre, the effect being like that of a huge bird's tail.

The chemise and undersleeves are of old Spanish lace, the neck being cut low, V-shaped and bordered with black velvet. About the throat is a high stock of black tulle, with a very wide frill at top and bottom.

The effect of the gown is very soft and supple. The cloak, made of the same material to match the gown, is a marvel of beauty. With it is worn a small three-cornered heaver that almost covered with fur and a stole collar with elaborate passementerie tassels on each end, one of which is tossed back over the left shoulder.

MISS DARLINGTON IS BRAVE IN FIRE PERIL
Daughter of Health Board President Helps Aged Relatives From Burning House.

A fire that did only trifling damage endangered the lives of two persons and proved a girl's courage to-day in the brownstone residence of James S. Beards, at No. 80 South Second street, Brooklyn. Mr. Beards, who is ninety years old and very feeble, is the father-in-law of Dr. Darlington, president of the Board of Health, and also father-in-law of Bishop George H. Darlington, of the Episcopal diocese of Pittsburgh.

There were in the house at the time the fire started Marguerite Darlington, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Dr. Darlington; her grandfather, Mr. Beards, and a grandniece, Mrs. Kate Egan, eighty years old.

The girl was sitting near a radiator on the third floor when flames burst out of it. Smoke poured into all the rooms in the house, and Miss Darlington had some difficulty in getting to her grandfather and his aged sister, although on the same floor. She had practically to carry them downstairs, but got both out safely and into the home of a neighbor. The firemen made short work of the blaze, which was caused by a defective flue.

DIED BECAUSE HE COULD EARN ONLY $25 A WEEK

Former $7,000 a Year Salesman Shot Himself When Offered Stipend.

After all, poverty is a comparative condition. Some men consider themselves rich with a strip of Subway tickets good for six days ahead. John Hadley killed himself to-day because the best he could do was to earn $25 a week. Hadley was forty-five years old and an expert in the wall paper business. Up to a year ago his income ranged from $5,000 to $7,000 a year. He was a salesman and worked on a percentage basis. His home was in Philadelphia.

Because of his convivial habits he lost his position. After vainly endeavoring to make a satisfactory connection in Philadelphia, he came to New York, four months ago, and engaged a room from P. P. Cappel, who lives at No. 324 1-2 West Twenty-fourth street.

Knowing nothing of the business outside the wall paper trade, Hadley sought to get something like his old place with a New York house in that line. To his surprise and chagrin he discovered that there were no openings for $5,000 men. He was offered several jobs at from $25 to $30 a week and refused them.

Hadley remarked to Mr. Cappel yesterday that he might as well be dead as confined to an earning capacity of $25 a week.

Early this morning Mr. Cappel heard three shots in Hadley's room and found the wall paper man dead across the bed. He had fired three shots at himself to make certain success in his suicidal endeavor.

The suicide left no notes or papers. Mr. Cappel does not know the names of any of his relatives or friends.
